

Kindergarten to 9th Grade

Kindergarten

In this picture, I am in a sandbox. It is March sixth. I remember one time around then I was running around in a swimsuit at about that time of year, and Mrs. McCraner drove up and asked if I was cold, to which I replied that I never got cold, and then promptly ran inside to get a sweater. I felt like such a liar. That was most definitely an impacting moment on my life.

1st Grade

In first grade, I was in a Waldorf school program. There were four of us in our first grade class, and we met three times a week. I'm really glad I had that sort of Kindergarten and first grade. I think I would have absolutely hated going to public school so young.

2nd Grade

Second grade was my first year at Onekama. I had not been used to actually doing school work. Before, I hadn't learned anything about math or science or writing. My school before was more focused on brain development. That seems more important to me, somehow....

3rd Grade

In third grade, I was friends with Brittany and Nisha. We were all so mean to each other! We always fought over each other, and always got mad at each other. The year seemed like constant fighting.

4th Grade

In fourth grade, I was in Mrs. Brown's fourth/fifth grade split class, and I remember I felt really cool about that. The most memorable part of that grade was playing funky truck 4WD on teagames.com. I find that sort of sad.

5th Grade

Fifth grade was sort of a terrible year for me. I had this green sweatshirt that I named George. I wore it every single day. The day in the picture, at Quiz Bowl, was the first day in what must have been months that I hadn't worn it.

6th Grade

In sixth grade, I remember being in Mulan.

The year before I had been in Beauty and the Beast, but I was a plate, not really important at all.

I felt really important in Mulan, even though I wasn't. That was the year that I actually started getting along with and being friends with my sister and her friends.

7th Grade

In seventh grade, I was really good friends with Emily Barnard. We were in shop together, and won prizes in some woodworking competition. I really loved shop. Besides that, it wasn't a very eventful year.

8th Grade

Last year, I was Annie in the school play. It was actually a really nice year. The play was really great, and it was fun actually getting to know the other people in it.

9th Grade

This is a picture of me in Biology this year. As you can tell from the content and boringness of the picture, nothing has really happened yet. That's definitely impacting stuff.
