Meet The Cast & Crew

Gerald Eipperle is a 9th grader at Onekama School. This is his first musical production. He was a bit sketchy about joining the play because he thought he lacked the “drama material”. But now he is thrilled to be a part of this. Gerald is playing George Gershwin, Policeman, and a Muzzy’s Boy. Gerald loves music and enjoys being a musician and hanging out with friends during his spare time. He hopes you enjoy this year’s production of “Thoroughly Modern Millie!”

Gabi Pargeon is a 5th grader from Bear Lake. This is her first tri-school production and she is extremely excited. She loves to climb trees and play basketball. Hope you enjoy the show!

She is vice-president of the Onekama chapter of the National Honor Society, Student Council representative, and is working on her Girl Scout Gold Award.

She just REALLY LOVES CATS, and she just wants to hug all of them but she can’t hug every cat! Yeah, so she’s a cat lover...She just thinks of how many don’t have homes, and how she should have them, and how cute they are. With the ears, and those whiskers, and the nose!!! She just wants them in a basket, on top of a rainbow. She just really wants a house full of them! SHE. LOVES. CATS.

Amanda Harthun is a teacher at Bear Lake. She is a self-professed drama junkie, loving equally the opportunity to work with students in bringing a story to life onstage, and catching a Broadway musical whenever possible. She is beyond excited to see this program grow from a dream she had 6 shows ago to the program it is today. The most rewarding part for her is seeing the change in the students as they grow together as a team, into their characters, and more confidently in their belief in themselves.

Bruce Peabody, technical director, started his teaching career at Bear Lake and retired. Subsequently he has worked for Onekama Consolidated Schools and Interlochen Arts Academy and has a strong technology background. He has been involved with the technology of the last three county cooperative productions.

Kayla Feil is a freshman at Onekama Schools. This is her 3rd play she has participated in . Kayla is in volleyball, active in her church's youth group, and is in Girl Scouts. Kayla is known as a Hufflepuff because she is a particularly good finder. Kayla ran away from home last fall because she felt the animals of the jungle were calling her name. She felt the urge to find them and become one of the baboons that live there. She's a true legacy in the animal world. She plays the saxophone in her school band and is also representative for her class. She thanks you for coming to the show and supporting the arts in schools!

Louise Barnard is a ninth grader at Onekama. She has been in all of the previous tri-school productions; last year she was Violet in Willy Wonka. Every time she gets nervous, she pictures a giant Panda Bear eating oranges outside a taco truck; it helps her A LOT. Tucker Laws is a freshman at Onekama. He is playing Jimmy Smith in the play this year. You may or may not recognize him as a wolf from "Beauty and the Beast"; back when his hair was similar to an afro. What a vicious wolf he mad. James Balars is a freshman at Onekama High School. He is operating the spotlight in the play this year. He has never been in another play and has never operated for a play, either. In his spare time James primarily is on the computer; either playing games or learning to program application.

Director's Notes

“You're So Worthwhile.”

I am a champion procrastinator. This year I made a resolve to get the program completed during spring break, and I did get done what I could as I was waiting for some more student biographies. I did however, stay true to form and procrastinate the director's note section. The show hadn't reached the point I refer to as magic, or maybe it's the point when we all take a collective sigh of relief as I excitedly announce, “Houston! We have a show.” The point I am referring to is when everything comes together. This year's show is probably the hardest show we have ever undertaken—the music is hard; it requires a lot of principal roles, deep subject matter; tap dancing and difficult choreography; intricate and elaborate sets. Because of this, things did not come together as quickly as other shows. As a result, the inspiration for writing these director's notes was lacking.

But as the show did come together, and when I began to really take a look around and see what was happening between community members, actors and actresses, and adult parent volunteers, I saw the magic was there all along. I have always been proud of our students, but this year, my cup runneth over with pride. It has been a pure joy for me to see students come out for their first year and grow in their comfort on stage, and in their confidence in themselves. Likewise, it has been thrilling to watch this growth in students from year to year. The fantastic thing about these incredible young cast members, is that they recognize the growth in each other and encourage it.

In the show, Millie tells Muzzy, who has offered her advice and motherly guidance about love, that she is “so worthwhile.” In conversing with a parent and adult volunteer, it came up that she told me I was “so worthwhile.” This really struck a chord, as this feeling among our cast, crew, and parent volunteers is mutual. I am deeply humbled by the comment, but the magic is that we all find each other “so worthwhile.” When brainstorming with older students recently about the impact the program has had on them for a News Advocate special, it was pointed out that everyone is welcomed in this program, regardless of talent or experience. We have a spot for everybody, and we all work together, doing our jobs well for the common good.

Maybe that is the reason we have over 50 students involved year after year after year. Maybe it is because we have fantastic parents who volunteer their time, energy, and resources to our children, making them feel like they are worthwhile. Maybe it is for the simple reason that deep down, we all need to feel worthwhile to someone. In the end, we are all a little exhausted, and many of us are fighting off sicknesses that we pass around to each other that are brought on surely by the close quarters, long hours, and late nights. But ask anybody in our cast about their experience, or any adult who has put in long hours on top of rehearsals, and I am sure they will tell you, because they (the students) are so worthwhile. Thank-you for supporting the arts in our local schools by your attendance at today's performance. We hope you enjoy the show.
