END NOTES

Like many of the sports cooperative programs shared between the three schools, this program is no different in the comradeship and success that can be accomplished when dedicated, talented people work together. Maybe it's just the simple fact that we have awesome people living in our area who make a great team. Of course all of the adults we have grown to depend on have once again rose to the occasion and devoted hours upon hours of their creative talents and resources to our production, and for that I am eternally grateful. I am always blown away by the little things and the attention to detail they put into the show that just takes the program to another level. Their support has without a doubt contributed to the success of the program.

This year marks the 7th production our communities have collaborated on to produce, and it is also our largest cast with over 70 students involved in various jobs in the show. Each year, it becomes more and more a student driven production and this year was no exception.

Kayla Feil is our stage manager and as a sophomore, that is a big task. She is the person in charge of our scene changes, props, and making sure our actors/actresses are where they need to be for the scene changes. It takes a great deal of organization and effort, and Kayla has truly stepped up.

We will sorely miss our group of seniors next year. Claire and Emily have been with us from the first production and the experience and passion they have for the stage is unparalleled. They have worked their way up through the ranks of the production from farm hands and villagers to the leads you see them in today. They are incredible young women, not only on the stage, but off as well, and they deserve all of the accolades that they have coming to them. Claire stayed after rehearsal one evening to create the poster you see promoting the show. Emily particularly stepped into a leadership role this year, and even though she is formally listed as a choreographer, she really has stepped into a co-director position. She has been our sounding board, student liaison, assistant to her mom in costumes, dynamic actress (Her rendition of "A Mother Doesn't Matter Anymore" will always be burned into my memory), a talented musician, and a logical and creative choreographer. Her choreography partner, Kaylan, joined our program a few years ago, first by running the spotlight, and finally last year she joined our cast. We wish she would have come out from behind the lights long ago, but we are happy to have her. She is responsible for much of the choreography as well, and she has a true gift for working with younger students. She has a impeccable stage presence--watch for the little things she does that takes Mrs. Macafee to a new level.

We are thrilled to have new faces and foreign exchange students involved in this year's show. Every person brings a new dynamic to the program, making it a richer experience for all. We are so proud of the unsung heroes in our production who do their jobs well, and work hard to continue developing them. There are a lot of future stars in our production, and we hope they know we are taking note!

I am excited to see what the future holds for this program. In the past year, the program has taken on new layers such as Emily and Tucker's participation in Michigan's High School Musical Theater Awards (The Ovation Awards) last year at MSU; a group's participation in WMU's Discover Theater Design Day this spring; and our impending trip to Chicago to see a Broadway musical. We have ideas for adding even more to the program, but for now we have "A Lot A Livin'" to do. Enjoy the show, and thank-you for supporting our cooperative drama program.
